Southwood nabbed

Deputies with the Breathitt County Sheriff's Office arrested Leslie Southwood Friday night at his residence in the Clayhole community.

Breathitt County Sheriff Ray Clemons said that Deputies Brant Noble and Marvin Reed arrested Southwood, 47, who had escaped from jail June 26, without incident. He had been considered armed and dangerous.

Clemons said he had received a telephone tip around 10:30 p. m. from a person he trusted that Southwood was at his residence putting down a rug.

He said that he and the two deputies drove near the residence. He stayed with the vehicles while the deputies went to the house. They looked in a window, and saw Southwood on the floor working on the rug. They then broke through the rear door. Southwood's female companion, Diane Short, screamed, but the deputies were able to apprehend Southwood. He was not armed.

Clemons said that he and the deputies transported Southwood to the Jackson Police Department. Kentucky State Police then transported him to the Three Forks Regional Jail in Beattyville.

Southwood had escaped from the jail at Beattyville by climbing a 12-foot tall metal pole in the exercise yard.

He was considered dangerous by police because of previous encounters with law enforcement involving weapons.

Southwood was serving 20 years for a probation violation. He was originally convicted of a 2008 arson. His probation violation stemmed from being arrested in Perry County in May for DUI, carrying a concealed deadly weapon and possession of a controlled substance.

While police were pursuing him in May, they followed him to a wooded area near Clayhole. Shots were fired at officers, and a gun battle ensued between them and an unknown shooter. Jeffery Lynn Southwood, a brother to Leslie Southwood, was shot and killed during the shootout.

In June, Southwood was sentenced to a year for assaulting his mother, Katherine Southwood in February. She said he had hit her in the face several times, hit other parts of her body and shoved her. She said she fled from him on an ATV because he was in possession of a handgun.

County approves tourism board, tax

Court Monday agreed to form of the tax. a tourism commission and to tax on motels and cabins. The revenue from the tax would be used to hire a tourism director and to advertise the county.

Linda Smith proposed the tax and commission. She said that Lee County is falling behind other counties that have adopted room taxes to attract more visitors. "We have no funds to promote tourism,' she said.

She said the tourism director could be part-time, and would be selected by the commission. The commission would be made up of a person nominated from the county, one from the city, one from the chamber of commerce, three from the motels and cabins, and one from the restaurants.

Judge/Executive Steve Mays said that 95 percent of the people who would pay the room tax are from out of the county.

Smith said she had proposed the commission and the tax several times, but had been turned down. The last time, she said, was in 2007.

Magistrate Tim Brandenburg said he was in favor of the proposal, but that if it did not work after four years it could be voted out. Magistrate Everett Lee Marshall said he also was in favor of the proposal.

A unanimous vote approved the proposal. Mays said that loses suit

 ${f T}$ he Lee County Fiscal Court has lost a claim before the Kentucky Court of Appeals that a road it said was a county road is in fact not one.

In question was a road on property that runs along the Kentucky River and up Walker's Creek. James Chambers, Darlene Chambers and Geneivive Campbell Brewer own the property.

The Chambers and Brewer had closed the property after they bought it in 1989. In 2006 the fiscal court wanted it open, saying that it included a part of a county road. Horse riders had requested the county action.

Last year, Special Judge Daniel Sparks ruled in favor of the landowners, saying that the county had no claim. He also ruled that a 1990 fiscal court declaration that all roads to cemeteries or with two or more houses on them were county roads was invalid.

Sparks found that the deed of the property made no reference to a county road; there were no cemeteries or families served by the road; and, that the county had "failed to follow the Eminent Domain Act of Kentucky and other Kentucky statutes in adopting the disputed roads."

After losing that case, the fiscal court appealed to the state Court of Appeals, say-

City in the red, but not as bad

The City of Beattyville ended the fiscal year with its general fund over $23,400 in the red, but that is a far cry from the $133,206 loss recorded at the end of the previous fiscal year.

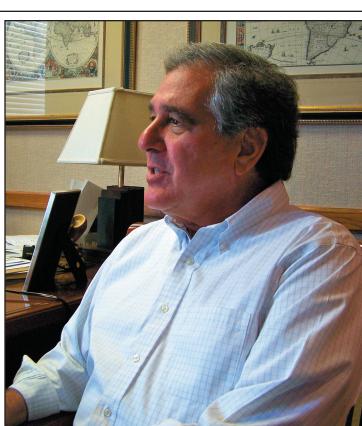

The dramatic improvement has been brought about by cuts to expenses throughout the general fund and sale of surplus equipment.

Most of the previous year's deficit was attributed to the city not accounting for the salaries of two police officers that had been hired under a federal grant. When the grant ran out, the officers stayed but the income was no longer there.

A substantial part of this most recent loss is also attributable to the police department. However, much of it can be traced to equipment and services associated with 911 dispatch.

General Fund revenues were $4,251 below the $984,750 budgeted for this past fiscal year. Expenses were $19,207

Spending focus ignores Kentucky Famlies

By Terry Brooks, Executive Director, Kentucky Youth Advocates

"The Kentucky Chamber re- is a common sense and vital leased a follow-up to their 2009 study, the Leaky Bucket, with an update focusing on reforming state spending in Kentucky. The Chamber provides a valuable voice on the issue and represents the business community with the wake of the recession.

While the report makes some excellent and necessary recommendations, like rebuilding the "state rainy day fund" and eliminating the structural deficit, it does so by calling for a state spending cap and ignores one of the root causes of the structural deficit—inadequate revenue. Just as only increasing revenue is not a real solution, neither is the lopsided argument of only cutting spending. The Commonwealth needs a balanced approach that ensures efficiencies and accountability in spending. to be sure, but creates adequacy and sustainability on the revenue side of the equation as well. A major factor in the increase in state expenditures in recent years is the exploding number of families that are struggling to make ends meet. They have turned to public programs, like food stamps, unemployment assistance, Medicaid and KCHIP, to simply get by as unemployment and family hardship remain

The Chamber rightly points out the importance of spending a greater portion of education funds on student performance. Reconfiguring funding streams to get resources to classrooms idea. This increases education levels of Kentucky's children and makes the state more competitive in the future. Also, the Chamber rightly acknowledges and commends the corrections systems reforms that came out real power. Unfortunately, the of the last session. The goals Chamber's report ignores the re- of these reforms were to save alities of what Kentucky children the state money by adopting and families face, particularly in sentencing reforms, reinvesting in treatment and prevention programs, and improving community corrections.

We would like to see these same goals for corrections reform expand into juvenile justice. Kentucky currently uses the most expensive and least effective approach within juvenile justice, which is locking kids up in secure detention for misbehaviors that are not crimes, like skipping school and running away from home. By focusing on prevention and improving efficiency, similar reforms can be made to reduce the use of secure detention for children.

The Chamber's report is ripe with good ideas. But its overriding premise is simply wrong. Now is not the time to focus solely on cutting spending. Now is the time to look towards a well-rounded approach to the situation, which must include increasing revenue. There is no question that economic development is a cornerstone for Kentucky's future but so are children and families. Unless public investments are made in the immediate, the real leaking bucket in this state is for the future of Kentucky's children and families."

Eye to Eye 😉

with David Blandford, M.D.

PRESCHOOLERS THROWN A CURVE

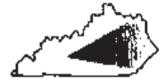

The refractive error known as "astigmatism" (a distortion in the curve in the cornea that can blur near and distance vision) is commonly displayed in children during the first year of life. After that, as the eye matures and infants begin using their eyes more, the astigmatism abates. However, this is not always necessarily the case. While previous studies have indicated that astigmatism is very common among Native Americans, recent research reveals that the refractive error is also relatively widespread among Hispanic preschoolers. While no one can say for sure why the incidence of astigmatism varies along ethnic lines, the study underscores the value of having eye evaluations be a part of infants' and preschoolers' routine wellness visits.

Astigmatism is very common. The exact reason for differences in corneal shape remains unknown, but the tendency to develop astigmatism is inherited. At KENTUCKY EYE INSTITUTE, we are always ready to assist you with your vision needs and answer any questions concerning your eye health. We believe everyone should have a professional eye examination on a regular basis to protect the priceless miracle of sight. Please call 606-666-9393 to schedule an appointment; we are currently accepting new patients. We specialize in "EYE CARE FOR ALL AGES."

We're located at 540 Jett Drive, Jackson, KY.

P.S. It is often difficult to assess preschoolers' vision because they are typically unable to verbalize their vision difficulties and have no other experience to compare with it.
